A Little History...

On Wednesday, August 16, 1893, the Town of Abington experienced a severe riot between officials & workers of the New Haven Railroad, townspeople & town officials over the laying of street car tracks resulting in jail terms of many. Legal action brought by the town ended in an historic decision by the Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts against the often though inherent right of the railroad company, As a direct result of the confrontation, the ABINGTON DEPOT was built & completed in June, 1894 as a peace offering. In 1979, then Governor Edward J. King proclaimed the NORTH ABINGTON DEPOT an historic building.
